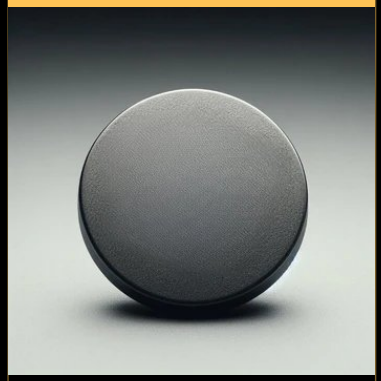
A dimeritium earring is a jewel crafted from dimeritium, typically employed during the training period of a Source to prevent them from experiencing outbursts, entering trances, etc. The earring harnesses the unique properties of the anti-magic metal, which, in small quantities, do not nullify magical abilities but rather help in controlling them. However, due to the rarity of the material involved, it is not readily accessible to the general public and is predominantly found in institutions such as the magic academies of Aretuza and Ban Ard. Once a Source has been trained to regulate their magical abilities, the earring is removed.

Dimeritium earring



A dimeritium earring

Type	Jewel
Effects	Help in regulating the abilities of a Source preventing them from experiencing outbursts, entering trances, etc (usually during their period of training in magical institutions)
Source	Dimeritium metal
Cost to buy	2000 bizants
Cost to sell	1500 bizants

The earring is designed with a deliberate consideration for aesthetics and functionality. In most cases, for women, it takes the form of a small spherical jewel, elegantly showcasing the metal's properties while remaining unobtrusive. For men, the design is often circular and flat, maintaining a subtle yet distinguished appearance.

The efficacy of the earring is most pronounced in young Sources whose nature as Sources has been identified early on. In the case of older Sources who may have developed mental illnesses like catatonia, its impact is more limited.

However, prolonged use of the earring has been shown to potentially generate a certain "dependence" in some Sources. This can manifest through symptoms such as persistent headaches, dizziness, and general discomfort. These symptoms arise from the removal of the slight suppressor of the channeling of magical energy that Sources typically engage in.

Another piece of jewelry that can assist Sources is the dimeritium amulet, but they are even rarer to see than earrings due to the need for more dimeritium to create them.
